HI,

Adapting to change is always a challenge but in the trade waste industry it's a given. Dealing with so many different requirements means that we need to be smart, efficient and cost effective. We have such adaptable tank designs that are used in so many applications, and that's due to our innovative and specific technology which is why on the outside a lot of product looks the same, but it's all in the internal configuration that counts. We're showcasing a couple of new products this month but our biggest, and best, is yet to come... we're super excited and will reveal all shortly.

At Halgan™ we're all about innovation, and our latest accessory product, a steel platform for servicing greasetraps, is the result of adapting to Sydney Water's latest policy change.
Requirements regarding service platforms for greasetraps in the Sydney Water area have changed in the last few months as they audit above ground greasetraps. In the past Halgan™ has been exempted from the platforms because our MGT™ and MGTA™ are only 1.5m high, however that has changed as Sydney Water now require a platform for any grease trap higher than 1.2m.
The result is a galvanised steel platform complete with the Halgan logo, that's 300mm high to meet requirements by Sydney Water, and suited to the Halgan MGT™ and MGTA™ Series.
We are also able to custom make platforms to suit your needs.

NEW ZEALAND IN FOCUS

The New Zealand Industrial Waters Conference was held in Auckland, and we shared a stand with our New Zealand distributor, The Clenz Project, who were gold sponsor of the event. The workshops, forums and presentations were both interesting and topical, with a vast range of people attending including scientists, Regional and Territorial Authorities, engineers, suppliers and liquid waste operators.
Ultimately the aim of the annual conference is to provide real time solutions to issues facing the Industry, and looking towards developing national standards, which they really are moving towards achieving.

SEPTIC TANKS GET THE BIG TICK

We have received accreditation for our HSEPS1000, 1500, 2000, 3000, 4000 and 5000 models with NSW Health. All Halgan™ septic tanks include our patented BioFilters which is required for all residential and commercial applications to treat wastewater discharge into septic tanks. The BioFilter stabilizes the high, surging, wastewater flows rates experienced during the day and, stops clogging of absorption trenches.
The BioFilter removes up to 90% suspended solids, 95% Oil/Grease and 45% BOD from the waste stream, and is virtually self-cleaning.
In residential installations, servicing the BioFilter only needs to happen when the septic tank is normally

From Halgan's point of view, it was a positive move in the market with a great level of interest shown in our products and the technology behind them.

serviced. In commercial installations servicing will depend on the flow rate, oil/grease, suspended solid loading and characteristics of the wastewater.

As an Australian owned manufacturing company that sells our product all over this great land we have a vested interest in the people from the city to the bush, from north to south, and outback to ocean. And this is why our latest charity to support is Herd Of Hope, an organisation that gives funds raised towards establishing initiatives that will support recipients and donor families in rural and regional Australia, and raise awareness of the organ and tissue donation and transplantation process, nationally and internationally.

Sadly, Australia ranks 22 in international organ donation rates, one of the lowest for a developed nation.

To kick off the fundraising, a team of stockmen wheeled their horses in front of an enthusiastic crowd, bringing a touch of the bush to the city on Bondi Beach, and celebrated mateship, life, love and gratitude. Incredibly the stockmen on Bondi had all been directly connected to a life-changing organ transplant, with event organiser, Megan McLoughlin being a direct organ recipient.

Halgan™ is proud to sponsor heifer 15, we called her Annie, and she's currently grazing her way around the Barossa getting ready to produce offspring for the next Herd Of Hope cattle drive.

MIXING IT UP

HHH Consulting and Moeco Plumbing worked together on a mixed development in Wolli Creek to go in the lower basement. They organised a MGTA™5000 with our new platform anda MGT™1000A to be delivered to site and Morgan from Moeco Plumbing was impressed that we supplied the inlet and outlet pipework and said it saves him both time and money.
